

International Orchestral Academy

Janáček Philharmonic Ostrava, based in Ostrava is one of the leading symphonic orchestras of the Czech Republic. Long orchestral tradition, typical bohemian sound and progressive repertoire are very much praised both by local audience and international reviewers. Excellence in performing not only Janáček, but most of the late-romantic to contemporary repertoire is one of the orchestra's strengths.

In 2025-2026 season the orchestra hosts conductors such as the designed chief conductor Daniel Raikin and guest conductors Andrey Boreyko, Lawrence Foster, Tania Miller, Christian Arming and soloists such as Benjamin Schmid, Pablo Barragán and Lukáš Vondráček.

The International Orchestral Academy (IOA) is suitable especially for students and graduates of music performance programmes at university level. The internship is unpaid and therefore highly suitable for Erasmus+ recipients. All academy members are responsible for securing themselves to cover all costs of their stay, such as travel expenses to/from Ostrava, accommodation, per diems, insurance, concert clothing, etc.

Trainees will gain hands-on orchestral experience in one of the leading Czech orchestras, taking part in most of the orchestra performances (subscription concerts, touring projects both locally and internationally). Trainees shall receive mentoring by the principal players of the orchestra.

IOA opens positions in these sections for the winter semester of the season 2025-2026:
